Tracey Rice and Paula Fontana - Fusion Risk Management	Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG): The Missing 'R' for Resilience	In time of significant climate and social turbulence, regulatory scrutiny, and investor expectation, Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) is increasingly at the heart of what it means to build a more risk-aware and resilient organization. The World Economic Forum recently suggested ESG is missing a letter – 'R' for resilience. “From the pandemic and devastating weather events to a restive and divided set of social movements, the growing pace of upheavals points to the fact that ESG measurement doesn't just need more uniformity, rigor and breadth. It also needs an additional variable in order to assess businesses' capacity to effectively recover, adapt and grow in the face of shocks and stress: resilience. Simply put, it is increasingly clear that investors can no longer outrun or ignore social and environmental problems. All evidence points to continued business and financial disruption in the years ahead.” This session outlines <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - How ESG is impacting the global ecosystem of the enterprise - The role of risk and resilience - How to reduce the risk of non-compliance and build a more sustainable, responsible brand - Practical takeaways from Fusion's own journey integrating ESG into the fabric of our organization 	May 24th, 2022	1:45PM-2:45PM
